

A BREXIT FAIRY TALE

by Yassine, Lisa, Jonathan, Adrian and Aya

Once upon a time, in a country not so far far away, the Brits lived in peace and agreement with the other lords and ladies of the European Union. At that time, the United Kingdom had close bonds with neighbouring countries and their alliance guaranteed peace and sharing. But on a dark day, a terrible curse fell upon the United countries of Great Britain. A mucky will for grand sovereignty grew in their proud hearts, invading their minds: little did they know that they were soon to be caught in a wretched tempest of chaos and despair. They needed heroes to lead them against the enemy!

This is the tale of the three heroes who assembled in order to save the countries of Great Britain which were so tormented by the rising evil. No one knew where it came from but it was an infectious plague poisoning the hearts of the good people who began resenting their allies beyond the sea.

Our first hero was David Cameron, who proudly carried the title of Prime Minister from 2010 to the life-changing year of 2016: he was a man who couldn't relieve his heart of the need to be supported by his people. The valiant man was keen to ask the commoners for their assent. He thought that the UK could weather the storm by sticking close to their allies but haranguing the crowd, armed with sharp arguments and vehement promises, his rival wanted to free the Brits from the EU.

Who was that savior, you might ask ? Was it James Bond? Was it prince charming or Legolas? This was Boris Johnson, the proud warrior who went by the name of Sir Boast-a-lot.

Sir Boast-a-lot's quest was a time of gaudy publicity, passionate speeches and shimmering NHS buses.

Our gentle-hearted knight, Sir Dave, decided to leave his people to choose if they wanted to leave the European Union or not.

It turned out that 51,9% of them wanted to be granted their independence.

With Sir Dave gone, Lady Theresa May served the country as Prime Minister and leader of the conservative Party from 2016 to 2019. To some folks, she was a true hero. Indeed, she was the second woman to have ever become prime minister in the UK.

She fought and fought in order to try and keep the country united. Some will say that she didn't try hard enough, others will imply that it was doomed to failure.

But why was this preacher of deals forced to step down? Well, our proud knight was struggling to get parliamentary support for the deal she struck with the EU.

She wrestled for her country but her deal was rejected once, rejected twice, rejected a third time by Parliament. Even though Lady May put so much effort into finding a compromise with the opposition, the so-called Labour Party, she sadly failed in this mission.

Utterly defeated, Lady May announced she would step down as prime minister and that she would resign as party leader.

This opened a golden campaign opportunity for Sir Boast-a-lot. He finally had the future of the country in his hands! He had great responsibilities, and needed to live up to the expectations of the populace. To reach his goal, which was to cure the country from the plague by negotiating a deal with the EU, Sir Boast-a-lot had a plan.

He would negotiate a brexit deal while at the same time announcing that he could at any moment decide to go for a no deal brexit. This clever bluff added additional pressure on the shoulders of the EU lords and ladies. After long months of negotiations, unsure of what could happen in a no deal brexit situation, they caved at the last minute and gave Sir Boast-a-lot what he wanted.

After a long and perilous journey, our hero Sir Boast-a-lot had succeeded in his mission. He showed courage in standing up to alyl his enemies and taking them down one after another for the good of the country.

A royal banquet was organized that day to celebrate his victory. But Sir Johnson couldn't enjoy the ceremony, the memory of his companions Lady May and sir Cameron haunted him, he could not forget the fact that he abandoned them in the middle of the road. Suddenly the faces of lady may and sir cameron appeared in the crowd. They walked over to their old friend and hugged him congratulating him on his achievement and confessing to him that he was right and that they should have followed him from the beginning.

Sir Boast-a-lot was hailed as the god of deal makers. And everything in Britain was great again thanks to the toil and sacrifice of our three favorite heroes. And everyone lived happily ever after.

The End
